

Biographical Notes

Richard Webb

CII Board Member (Lay)

Richard is a financial services professional, who has been engaged in a variety of roles across the financial services industry.

Richard's early career involved working with Nobel Lowndes and Partners; an employee benefits consultancy, and at that time a major player in this space.

In 1990, Richard joined LAUTRO, the self-regulatory organisation (SRO) responsible for the life, pensions and collective investments industry. Through a merger of SROs and legislative changes, Richard found himself working for PIA, and then latterly FSA. In his time at the regulator, Richard held senior management positions in the Enforcement and Supervision departments.

In 1998, Richard became Head of Compliance for National Westminster Bank's regulated salesforces, and then took on much wider responsibility following the acquisition of NatWest by RBS.

Since 2010, Richard has held a number of senior management roles at the likes of Tesco Bank, Santander and Which?

Richard is currently a director of a company that provides specialist regulatory consultancy and interim management support.

Out of work, Richard is a long-suffering Crystal Palace FC supporter, as well as an avid collector of fine wine. The two interests are not necessarily related, though the latter can sometimes dull the pain of the former.
